

The FCC needs to stop its blatant disregard for the public's rights. Stop defending mega-corporations. If signals are being aimed at my head, I have every right to receive and descramble such signals for my use. You have no right to force a digital rights management system into new digital broadcast streams. I may not pay for television with money, but I sure do pay with all of the commercials being blasted at me all day long. Therefore I have the right to do whatever I want with those signals, without restriction, to descramble, record, and write to alternative media. Stop supporting mega-corporations and for once support the consumers, for which your agency was created to protect!